lex. Nowadays, people are getting more interest in visiting different museums and galleries. It is hard to deny that owners of these kinds of places are interested in gaining the amount of visitors.

st. (I) have checked some features of the most popular English museums and galleries. Firstly, it is true that galleries are not becoming more popular as fast as museums. They are losing their attendance. lex. Secondly, we can mention that British Museum has the most attending museum by the end of 2017. gr. It can be ^{become} caused by citizens who act more respectfully for their country than some years ago.

lex. However, there are some museums which are losing the amount of visitors. They are Natural History Museum and Science Museum. They were the most attending places in 2013 but with their introduction of admission charges their popularity left while British Museum's one didn't because its owners didn't introduce any admission charges. gr. By the way, we see that history museums are getting more visitors or losing less than Science museums. The fact is that people are more interested in history than in science (while) in 2013 the most popular museum was the Science one.

st. So, if (I) were asked to give some recommendations to the owners of different museums, I would not advise to introduce admission charges. In addition, I want to let them notice that history museums are becoming more and more popular today. The owners should make a conclusion from that.

gr. To sum up, in my view, there is nothing bad about the fact that the amount of museums visitors is rising now. We just have to use information given in different attendance graphs correctly.
